Position Summary

National law enforcement agencies actively seek new approaches and partnerships to enhance their future-readiness to prevent, detect, investigate, and disrupt transnational crime syndicates. Since 2005, RMIT has provided learning opportunities which positively shape the future generation of police, immigration, border control and customs officials to enable them to advance efforts to lead innovation and proactively counter transnational crime and the illicit movement of people and goods.

The Facilitator - Transnational Security Training (TST) joins an active team which provides high-level coordination and facilitation of RMIT Vietnam's TST programs targeting the international law enforcement community (primarily emerging and developing leaders responsible for leading responses to transnational crime) in the Asia Pacific region. This role requires excellence in curriculum design and delivery, commitment to transformative learning approaches, high-level client engagement skills, proficiency in all aspects of program management, and a robust understanding of international law enforcement and the transnational crime landscape.
